MR. HULL FOR THE SENATE.

A close friend of Congressman Hull has made the statement that "if things get right Cordell will enter the race to win." Let's see if Mr. Hull can really afford to "win" in that race.

Every one concedes that a seat in the senate is more desirable than one in the house, under like conditions. In the case of Congressman Hull there are no "like conditions."

When on the circuit bench on this district Judge Cordell Hull made a most enviable reputation and at the time he made the race for congress one of the handicaps he had in this county, especially, was that his services as circuit judge had been so very satisfactory that our people regretted to lose him and some hesitated to vote for him for congress on that ground.

He was elected, went to congress and has made a most enviable record. He has made such a record that few if any in congress stand higher than he. But can he do the same in the senate, in case he should be elected? It is not probable for the following reasons:

First there must be the opportunity, which does not now exist through the pressing need of any special legislation as did exist when he drafted the income tax law, which is the thing that made him a shining light in the nation. There are older and abler men in the senate than he. Abler in the point of experience and distinguished service it not in actual brain ability. It would be exceedingly difficult for him to overcome those two handicaps and the other one of no specially important legislation being before the country in which he might reasonably expect to figure.

Again, there is little doubt that the republicans will elect the next president and have a congressional majority also. That would again handicap Mr. Hull in the senate, but in the house he would be very liable to come to the front as the minority leader, which is the highest and most prominent place any member of the minority party can hope to attain.

Mr. Hull as leader of the minority in the house would be a much bigger man than Mr. Hull as a senator.

While Mr. Hull would be sure of a very strong vote throughout this section for the senate, he has a hold on this district for congress that can scarcely be shaken, which could not be said of his position should he win the race, for the senate, and there are many rocky places and uphill pulls before he would reach the senate.

We do not believe Mr. Hull can afford nor do we think he will be a candidate for the senate under present conditions.

DISAPPOINTED BUT NOT DISCOURAGED.

The fact that the Cumberland county road bonds did not find a buyer will come as a great disappointment to many people over the county, but the end is not yet by any means for the bonds will be sold and our roads will be built.

There never was a time when we needed roads so badly as now. There never was a time when good roads would do so much for Cumberland county as now.

People will not come here to make homes and farms unless we build better roads. Without more people we will make no progress of importance for it takes people to make a country that is worth living in.

Our people are making wonderful

NEAR DEATH

BY SMOTHERING

But Husband, With Aid of Cardui, Effects Her Deliverance.

Draper, N. C.—Mrs. Helen Dalton, of this place, says: "I suffered for years, with pains in my left side, and would often almost smother to death."

Medicines patched me up for awhile but then I would get worse again. Finally, my husband decided he wanted me to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, so he bought me a bottle and I began using it. It did me more good than all the medicines I had taken.

I have induced many of my friends to try Cardui, and they all say they have been benefited by its use. There never has been, and never will be, a medicine to compare with Cardui. I believe it is a good medicine for all womanly troubles.

For over 50 years, Cardui has been relieving woman's sufferings and building weak women up to health and strength.

If you are a woman, give it a fair trial. It should surely help you, as it has a million others.

Get a bottle of Cardui to-day.

progress in farming and cattle raising.

The progress of the last three years has been greater than any ten before. A very sensible and observing citizen remarked the to the Chronicle man the other day: "This country will make more progress in the next ten years than it ever did in any fifty before, and nothing is so necessary to that progress as good roads; we need them; must have them, and will have them."

The writer agrees most heartily with this man on every point. Because of that belief, we are not discouraged or cast down by the failure of the bonds to sell. We feel sure they will sell, the roads will be built, our population will increase and this country will at no distant date become the garden spot of Tennessee and its paradise as a place in which to live and have a happy and prosperous home.

The Millennium is dawning for Cumberland county.

The opposition to Senator Lee have certainly drawn first blood, but if they think the fight is won they have several things coming to them. It is well understood that he is for Luke first, last and all the time, regardless of the wishes or rights of friend or foe, but while that makes him some enemies it likewise makes him hard to handle.

The fight will be a warm one and no evidence exists at present to distinctly mark the winner.

There is not now nor never was a single logical reason reason why women should not be allowed to vote. Some reasons are presented, but when thoroughly analyzed the seeming reasons for denying them the ballot fade away and the reasons for votes for women grow stronger.

Nearly six millions of acres of land has recently been opened for settlement in Alaska by proclamation of President Wilson. It is about one half of the Chugach national forest. Very little of it is fit for agricultural purposes and has little valuable timber.

Indications are that former Governor Patterson will enter the race for United States Senator. If anything is lacking to add ginger to the contest Patterson will surely supply it.

"The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind exceedingly fine." Eh, Hilary?

ARE YOU A SOIL-BUILDER?

The Soil-Robber Is Lacking in One of the First Elements of Good Citizenship

Never before in the history of the world was the subject of soil building looked upon as being so important as at the present. Never before in the history of the world was it so easy to build soil as now because of the great light that scientists have thrown on the subject. The following from the Progressive Farmer puts the case clearly and strongly:

"No country has ever been or ever will be greater than its common people,—the people whose feet daily press the bosom of Mother Earth; and no farming people can ever be great unless the lands they live upon are fat and fruitful.

"It is given to but few men to be great, as greatness is commonly reckoned; but it true greatness lies in service, in doing well our share of the world's work, and, when we go, leaving behind us a world a little better for our having lived in it contributing our bit to the welfare and happiness of the present generation and all the generations yet to be—if this be greatness, then, no less than poets and painters, no less than warriors and statesmen, is the soil-building farmer a great man, worthy to be ranked with the greatest benefactors of mankind.

"Hitherto, particularly in the south, where a heavy rainfall and mild winters are factors in depleting soil fertility, soil building has not been easy; on the other hand, it has been both difficult and expensive.

But the coming of the winter growing clovers and vetches, with the absolute certainty that they will thrive practically everywhere in the South, has brought soil-building possibilities hardly dreamed of twenty years ago. No longer is it necessary to buy nitrogen, the most expensive of all plant foods; no longer need we be without humus, the magic key that unlocks nature's great plant food storehouse.

"What boundless possibilities there are in these crops! What splendid hopes and visions of better soils, better crops, better people and better living! Through them the Southern farmer, as no other farmer in all America, has a truly wonderful opportunity.

Would you double your corn and cotton yields? Would you cut your fertilizer bills in half? Would you ward off drought and flood, and insure your crops? Would you build better homes, good roads, good schools? Would you have a part in the making your community and the South greater and better? Would you leave, as a monument to your life's work, a bit of God's earth better than you found it?

Would you do all these, then grow CLOVERS."

PEACE RUMORS ANALYZED.

Not Probable That Germany Proffered to Cede Galicia, but There Is Some Chance That Peace Has Been Considered In Some Way.

The remarkable tale of two influential Russian newspapers telling of Germany's peace overtures to Russia created a stir in New York's financial and political circles, although it is generally admitted that the rumors, as given by the Russian newspapers, are not to be taken very seriously. New York circles in close touch with the various Embassies in Washington point out:

1. That Germany would not make these overtures to Russia at a time when the Russian army is facing destruction.

2. That Germany would not offer to Russia a province belonging to Austria.

3. That Germany and Austria could not cede a province to the Czar that has been just reconquered from Russia in a bloody struggle and that would bring Russia in closer touch with other Slavonic nations. Galicia under Russian rule is bound to increase Russian influence in the Balkans, to strengthen Panslavism, and, of course, make Russia the immediate neighbor of Hungary, Austria's biggest corn chamber.

RUSSIAN AIMS.

It has been said that the present war is Russia's war. This is so far correct, if we take into consideration that Russia went into this war with the object of conquering Galicia and thus subjugate the whole Ucrainian people and gain another access to the Balkans, and, secondly, of conquering Constantinople and of realizing the old dream that Russia has had since Peter the Great.

The Russian Premier himself, Monsieur Goremizkin, and the leader of the Russian Cadets, Monsieur Melukoff, have made this quite clear in many speeches from the platform of the Duma, though they claimed that the immediate cause of Russia's going into the war was a matter of Slavonic honor.

Judging from the sacrifices the Russians have made in Galicia, there can be no mistake about Russia's aim in the present war.

TEUTONIC AIMS.

But also from the point of view of the Teutonic Powers the present war is a Russian war. These powers were and are still anxious to prevent a further Slavonic expansion towards the West, to paralyze Panslavism, which they consider a real menace, and consequently to bring about such political and geographical changes as to compel the Czar to fall back from his outer positions in the West, which, according to Teutonic experiences during the last 12 months, were endangering the position of the Central Powers along their Eastern borders.

WHY NOT CEDE GALICIA.

Now, if the Central Powers would agree to cede Galicia to Russia, the whole bloody Eastern campaign would have no sense at all, as far as Germany and Austria are concerned. One of Russia's principal aims in this war having been the conquest of Galicia, the ceding of Galicia to the Czar under given circumstances would mean to turn the Russian defeats into a victory, even if Russia should be willing to recompense the Central Powers by the ceding of Russia Poland.

That is why, in the opinion of New York's financial and political circles, the Petrograd peace rumors, as given by the two Russian newspapers, are considered as not being compatible with political possibilities and probabilities.

NOT TOTALLY GROUNDLESS.

But still it is held in New York's political circles that there is something in these peace rumors. The Russians are already aware of the fact that in principle they failed in this war, and that they could only be compensated for their heavy losses if the Sultan's capital should be captured and handed over to them as a reward for their help to the Allies.

But if Constantinople should hold out and the Russians army should be partly or totally put out of action the Russians would have no reason to continue the war any longer.

Besides the Allies, having no reason to expect more military help from Russia, would probably not be ready to continue to finance the Czar.

If military Russia is done with, it will be much more to the interest of the French investor that Russia should come to terms with the Central European Powers in order to prevent the total disintegration of Russian economical conditions.

OTHER REASONS FOR PEACE.

There are many other political reasons why Russia should consider it wise to come to terms with the Teutonic force if the terms should not be too humiliating to her.

The Russian government is, of course, very anxious to see the stability of its State machine secured. Experiences after the Russian Japanese war have taught the Russian Government to reckon with the possibility of internal trouble. Though the Russian populace is very patriotic, the Russian Government is held responsible for the defeats of the Russian army and for the shortcomings of the Russian army administration.

RUSSIAN DISSATISFACTION.

The speeches in the Duma a few days ago indicated clearly that there exists even among the members of the Duma some sort of dissatisfaction with the Government. Two members of the Duma openly attacked the present Russian regime.

Anyhow the Russian Government must see to it that there should remain an army strong enough to deal with possible internal trouble throughout the vast empire. For this reason alone the Russian Government could not fight to the last soldier, and therefore the belief is growing that for this reason Russia would be willing to enter peace negotiations much earlier than it is generally thought.

NOT SO DIFFICULT.

The political difficulties arising out of the war could also be settled much easier than it is generally believed, because the Czar himself has promised autonomy to Poland.

As the Central European Powers have also in mind to grant Poland some sort of autonomy, the question of the Polish territory conquered from the Russians could be solved in such a way as not to look as though Russia emerged from the war conquered and beaten.
